Music workshops

8:03pm Wednesday 22nd August 2007

BUDDING singers can take advantage of a special series of workshops designed to pay homage to one of the world's most popular pieces of music.

Lancaster University is holding the day of workshops to celebrate Handel's popular masterpiece, Messiah, on September 22 and the day will culminate in an evening performance in the Anglican Chapel, accompanied by international concert organist Dr Tim Rishton.

The workshops are open to everyone and include sessions on 18th century organ music and the place of the oratorio in 18th English music.
