Tim's organ first is one of special note

This Summer, for the first time, there will be a series of lunchtime organ recitals on the historic organ of St Cybi's Church, in the centre of Holyhead.

The fine two-manual mechanical-action organ came originally from Easton Hall, Chester and of its kind is without parallel in Gwynedd.

The recitals will be given on July 3, 10 24 and 31 and on August 21 and 28 (all Thursday lunchtimes from 12.45 until 1.30).

Visitors or those working in the town are welcome for the whole or just part of any of the recitals. The doors will be left open so that people may come and go as they please. Admission is free, but there is a box available for donations to the work of the church.

All the recitals will be given by the organist Timothy Rishton (above), who works at the University of Wales. He was trained at the Universities of Reading and Manchester, where he won several organ-playing awards, and now regularly gives recitals in cathedrals, universities and colleges throughout Britain, Northern Europe and Scandinavia.

He has recorded for Sain and the English company Wealden and broadcasts frequently on radio and television, including some half-dozen recent broadcasts for HTV and BBC television.

He also travels widely as a lecturer, and his scholarly work has won several awards. He had published many articles, is working on a Welsh translation of a text book, and is part-author of a recent book on keyboard music.
